Manager's Comments

The fund posted a very pleasing return during the month of February against an extremely volatile global equity market backdrop. Global equity markets sold off across the board and posted major declines lead by the US market as fears of the impact of rising yields began to weigh on investors. The FTSE/JSE All Share Index returned -2.0% for the month. We are pleased with the fund's performance of +0.4% in a very tough and volatile market.

With the renewed sense of confidence and optimism that is sweeping through the South African economy, February once again saw strong net buying from foreigners of local equities. The fund was well positioned to benefit from a rally in local stocks including retailers and banks. In addition, the listed property index declined 9.9% and the fund's positioning enabled it to capitalise on this decline, which contributed meaningfully to the return for the month.

Among the detractors for the month was British American Tobacco. Although the company reported a good set of results marked by a positive growth outlook for their Next Generation Products, concerns about rising yields put pressure on the stock. We believe that at its current valuation British American Tobacco is offering a very attractive risk/return opportunity.

We believe the portfolio is well positioned to not only withstand global market volatility, and in some instances even benefit from it, but also to capitalise on the improvement in the South African economy. We continue to believe that this renewed optimism in South Africa by investors, corporates and consumers will continue to support the local equity market.
