Manager's Comments

March saw the return of volatility to global markets after 2017 proved to be one of the least volatile years in history. South African equities performed poorly with the FTSE/JSE All Share Index returning -4.2%. The fund posted a pleasingly resilient performance against this backdrop of -0.1%. Amidst a global sell-off in technology shares, Naspers declined by 11.6% during March which was one of the main contributors to the market's decline.

The fund's performance came from a long position in a property company which rallied quite significantly after a few months of relative underperformance as well as several short positions across multiple sectors which helped the fund weather the market volatility over the month.

While our positioning in the portfolio continues to be biased towards a constructive outlook for South African growth, we are cognizant of the increasing global tension stemming out of the US and thus taking profit where we feel prudent and keeping powder dry in order to take advantage of opportunities that may arise as a result of the market correction we are seeing.
