

Fund Managers Thoughts

A volatile trading environment seems likely ahead resulting from an extended trade war with neither China nor the US budging. Emerging markets are under pressure with our peers doing South Africa no favours due to high inflation and materially weaker currencies. We are concerned with the SARB raising rates as inflation rises and our currency seems structurally weaker for now. Accordingly we look to increase the offshore weighting of our fund while holding our higher weighting towards Rand Hedge and commodity stocks. We favour Rand hedges of Sappi, Aspen, Bidcorp and the mining stocks as China looks to intensify its winter shut downs of polluting industries. The structurally weaker Rand will favour our largely Rand hedge biased All Share Index which may provide share price momentum and a potential repeat of 2017's performance, which was materially better in the second half.

Positioning Our Portfolio

Capricorn funds experienced a volatile August with Blue Label Telecoms, MTN, Libstar and Naspers underperforming in the period due to unforeseen events. Our expectation of a weaker Rand worked in our favour as our commodity and Rand hedge stocks negated the losses mentioned above. Retail companies reported earnings in line with expectations but depicted a depressed business environment in both clothing and food retail, reinforcing our view of the consumer remaining under pressure. Mining stocks reported healthy balance sheets amid strong commodity prices and look likely to improve cash returns to shareholders. Financial stocks appear expensive given our weak Rand view, higher inflation outlook and potential electioneering ahead of 2019. Consequently we look to trim our financials exposure into the current share price strength.
